In 2004, we came close.

In 2000, we came close.
Barack Obama has the judgment to oppose the War in Iraq from the start. Floridians are looking for a leader who has the judgment to lead America in a dangerous world and the courage to stand by his convictions even when it may not be the politically popular thing to do.

"Westerners have a healthy suspicion about Washington politics. Barack Obama can win in Colorado because he represents the kind of bold change that can break the grip of lobbyists, move beyond the same old partisan battles and get things done."

– Sec. Federico Peña, former Clinton cabinet member and Denver Mayor

"Democrats win in Virginia when we stand on principle and bring people together. More than any other person I have seen, Barack Obama unites people around an authentic message of hope, optimism and change."

– Gov. Tim Kaine, Virginia

"Barack Obama has the judgment to oppose the War in Iraq from the start. House lawmakers are looking for a leader who has the judgment to lead America in a dangerous world and the courage to stand by his convictions even when it may not be the politically popular thing to do."

With Obama, Democrats have a golden opportunity to win in at least a dozen states where Democrats came up short in 2000 and 2004, including Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Missouri, North Carolina, Ohio, Tennessee, and Virginia.

"Barack Obama inspires hope in those who have been discouraged and shut out of the political process. He is a role model not just for the young or for people of color, but for all Americans who are ready to join this movement for change. That movement will propel Democrats to victory in Ohio and across the country."

– Columbus Mayor Michael Coleman, Ohio

"Democrats win in Virginia when we stand on principle and bring people together. More than any other person I have seen, Barack Obama unites people around an authentic message of hope, optimism and change."

– Gov. Tim Kaine, Virginia

"Iowa is a key state not only in the nominating process but also in the electoral college. Barack Obama’s honest, straight forward approach is winning over Democrats, Independents and even Republicans here in Iowa."

– State Rep. Pam Jochum, Iowa

"Iowa is a key state not only in the nominating process but also in the electoral college. Barack Obama’s honest, straight forward approach is winning over Democrats, Independents and even Republicans here in Iowa."

– State Rep. Pam Jochum, Iowa

Only Barack Obama can change the map for Democrats in 2008.

National polling shows that Barack Obama is the best candidate in the Democratic Primary to win with Independent and Republican voters in November.

Barack Obama can turn out younger voters and African-American voters in unprecedented numbers, helping the entire Democratic ticket while changing the math and changing the electoral map in 2008.

"Barack Obama has the judgment to oppose the War in Iraq from the start. House lawmakers are looking for a leader who has the judgment to lead America in a dangerous world and the courage to stand by his convictions even when it may not be the politically popular thing to do."

With Obama, Democrats have a golden opportunity to win in at least a dozen states where Democrats came up short in 2000 and 2004, including Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Missouri, North Carolina, Ohio, Tennessee, and Virginia.

"Barack Obama inspires hope in those who have been discouraged and shut out of the political process. He is a role model not just for the young or for people of color, but for all Americans who are ready to join this movement for change. That movement will propel Democrats to victory in Ohio and across the country."

– Columbus Mayor Michael Coleman, Ohio

"Democrats win in Virginia when we stand on principle and bring people together. More than any other person I have seen, Barack Obama unites people around an authentic message of hope, optimism and change."

– Gov. Tim Kaine, Virginia

"Iowa is a key state not only in the nominating process but also in the electoral college. Barack Obama’s honest, straight forward approach is winning over Democrats, Independents and even Republicans here in Iowa."

– State Rep. Pam Jochum, Iowa

"Democrats win in Virginia when we stand on principle and bring people together. More than any other person I have seen, Barack Obama unites people around an authentic message of hope, optimism and change."

– Gov. Tim Kaine, Virginia

"Barack Obama has the judgment to oppose the War in Iraq from the start. House lawmakers are looking for a leader who has the judgment to lead America in a dangerous world and the courage to stand by his convictions even when it may not be the politically popular thing to do."

With Obama, Democrats have a golden opportunity to win in at least a dozen states where Democrats came up short in 2000 and 2004, including Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Missouri, North Carolina, Ohio, Tennessee, and Virginia.

"Barack Obama inspires hope in those who have been discouraged and shut out of the political process. He is a role model not just for the young or for people of color, but for all Americans who are ready to join this movement for change. That movement will propel Democrats to victory in Ohio and across the country."

– Columbus Mayor Michael Coleman, Ohio

"Democrats win in Virginia when we stand on principle and bring people together. More than any other person I have seen, Barack Obama unites people around an authentic message of hope, optimism and change."

– Gov. Tim Kaine, Virginia

"Iowa is a key state not only in the nominating process but also in the electoral college. Barack Obama’s honest, straight forward approach is winning over Democrats, Independents and even Republicans here in Iowa."

– State Rep. Pam Jochum, Iowa

"Barack Obama has the judgment to oppose the War in Iraq from the start. House lawmakers are looking for a leader who has the judgment to lead America in a dangerous world and the courage to stand by his convictions even when it may not be the politically popular thing to do."

With Obama, Democrats have a golden opportunity to win in at least a dozen states where Democrats came up short in 2000 and 2004, including Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Missouri, North Carolina, Ohio, Tennessee, and Virginia.

"Barack Obama inspires hope in those who have been discouraged and shut out of the political process. He is a role model not just for the young or for people of color, but for all Americans who are ready to join this movement for change. That movement will propel Democrats to victory in Ohio and across the country."

– Columbus Mayor Michael Coleman, Ohio

"Democrats win in Virginia when we stand on principle and bring people together. More than any other person I have seen, Barack Obama unites people around an authentic message of hope, optimism and change."

– Gov. Tim Kaine, Virginia

TPM - Poll: Obama More Electable Than Hillary

By Eric Kleefeld - December 18, 2007, 11:31AM

The new Gallup poll finds that Barack Obama would be a stronger Democratic nominee than Hillary Clinton. Either of them could win when matched up against those top Republicans, but Obama has stronger margins and is above 50% support for himself in all three cases.

Obama (D) 51%, McCain (R) 45%
Clinton (D) 49%, McCain (R) 48%
Obama (D) 53%, Huckabee (R) 42%
Clinton (D) 53%, Huckabee (R) 44%
Obama (D) 51%, Romney (R) 38%
Clinton (D) 52%, Romney (R) 46%

(Survey USA, Iowa General Election Survey, December 12-15)

For more information visit IowaBarackObama.com or call 1-888-OBAMA-IA (1-888-622-6242).

Change our politics. Change the map. Barack Obama – Change we can believe in.